

ABSTRACT

A novel integrated key board and optical scanner, preferably of shape and size corresponding to that of standard conventional keyboards, sharing common mechanical support and electrical and electronic functions, with features of optional attachment and detachment of the scanner from the keyboard, and use of both conventional and flat-bed scanner techniques.